

Cervical Cancer Screening

- Women 21 to 64 years of age or if you are sexually active will receive a Pap test to screen for cervical cancer at least every three years. Cervical Cancer is nearly 100% preventable, yet it is the second most common cancer among women worldwide.
- The Pap smear test (Papanicolou) detects cervical cancer and precancerous lesions. A woman who does not have a regular Pap test significantly increases the chances of developing cervical cancer.
